A: This error occurs when Windows can't connect to your remote VNC server. Check this guide: Troubleshooting VNC connection issues. From the guide: Make sure you know your hostname (or IP address), username, and password for the VNC server. Make sure the VNC server is properly started up, and that it is working properly. In Vista and Windows 7, press the Windows+R keyboard shortcut. Type msconfig and click OK. Click the Services tab. Locate VNC (or Virtual Network Computing), and make sure that it is set to start automatically. If it is not, double-click the checkbox next to VNC and click the Add button. Make sure the checkbox next to VNC is checked. Click OK to exit the Services window and click Start to restart the Windows services. Also check this post for more info about IP conflict on VNC: IP conflicts at the same range? Hope that helps!

The Conservative MP who is trying to become the first black MP of the new House of Commons said it is vital to break down the barriers of exclusion in order to find true equality. Minister for Ports, Dover and Deal, Sarah Newton, is hoping to win the by-election in the safe Tory seat on 3 December. She said racial equality is not about placing minority communities at the centre of the nation but creating opportunities for everyone. "This is about creating opportunities in the workplace and in all public services. For example, I want to ensure that all police officers from black and minority ethnic communities are fully represented in the police," she said. "But it is also about trying to tackle the inequalities that still exist in every part of our society. Race equality should be about creating opportunities, not
