example, U.S. Pat. No. 5,060,684 to Ashida describes a fiber reinforced composite material as a combination of a woven fabric and a prepreg disposed on the surface of the woven fabric. Ashida is silent to the use of multiple prepreg layers. Similarly, PCT Publication No. WO 98/35594 describes using several prepreg layers to provide a laminated composite. It has also been proposed that composite structures can be produced by means of impregnating fibers with uncured matrix material. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 5,290,674 to Sheng describes a batch type process for producing composite structures in which a fiber optic transceiver module is inserted into a partially cured matrix material, which partially cures the matrix material to the extent that it adheres to the fiber optic transceiver module.
