Interleukin-13 and early cytokine-receptor interactions. Interleukin-13 (IL-13) is an important cytokine in the pathogenesis of asthma. IL-13 is structurally related to IL-4 and is a member of the type 2 cytokine subfamily. IL-13 shares many of the biological activities of IL-4 and binds to the alpha 1 chain of the IL-4R. Signal transduction of IL-13 may be mediated by the recruitment of the common gamma-chain of the IL-4R, but the inability of IL-4 to induce IL-13-dependent differentiation of activated monocytes or eosinophils suggests that other molecules are involved in IL-13 signaling. A number of cytoplasmic signaling molecules have been implicated in IL-13 signal transduction including PI3 kinase, Ras, c-Src tyrosine kinase, and NFkappaB. Recent studies of cell lines transfected with the IL-4R demonstrate that IL-13 receptor complexes associate with a number of cytoplasmic signaling molecules including phospholipase Cgamma, PI3 kinase, and PKC. The preferential role of these molecules in the transduction of IL-4 versus IL-13 signals is beginning to be elucidated. The signal transduction of IL-13 during the interaction of monocytes with the airway epithelium appears to be involved in the recruitment of inflammatory cells to the airway and may be relevant to the pathogenesis of pulmonary inflammation in asthma.
