the application through which you can navigate from one place to the other.Q: Does asfaudioreader support x-ms-blob-type (streamed blob), or need to stream it? I'm using asfaudioreader to read x-ms-blob-type (streamed blob) content. The problem is that it keeps blocking when it reaches the end of the content. The same application works fine on iOS devices, but I don't have access to iOS devices. I know I can stream the data using asfaudioformat - I have done it before successfully, but I'd rather not do it because that would require me to write a custom mapper for the container format (I'm assuming it's more likely to be supported).

Does asfaudioreader support x-ms-blob-type? If not, does it need to stream the data? Is there a way to read files in streaming format, but still treat them like files? Edit: I just realised that there might be a way to do this with asfaudioformat - I'm using it right now, but I can't figure out how to tell it to keep reading the file until the end. 0cc13bf012
