Biography Eggersdorfer was the son of the notable tinsmith of Hanau, Johann Eggersdorfer, and his wife, Maria Koeßli. In 1762, he made his first journey to Strasbourg to study with Johann Joseph Fux, but failed to graduate. In 1767, he continued his studies in Munich, where he was primarily taught by Johann Georg Härtel. After 1771, he lived with his father in the capital. It was not until 1778 that Eggersdorfer finally graduated and received a scholarship from the Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel-Bevern. He began his career in Hanau as a music teacher in 1779 and, in 1784, became the organist at St. Michael's Church in Hanau. In the spring of 1785, he was appointed to St. Bonifatius as successor to Gerhard Stolze, who had died. He left Hanau in 1789 and, following his father's death in 1791, he was appointed the town's music teacher. In 1799, Eggersdorfer made his first trip to Zurich, where he visited Konrad Ludwig Laufenberg. On the return trip, he stopped in Strasbourg, where he met his former teacher Fux.
