One type of memory device, commonly referred to as a solid state drive (SSD) uses a non-volatile memory to store data. The non-volatile memory may not have the internal circuitry for a traditional rotating disk drive to store data. However, since the data is not stored on the storage media itself, but rather on the memory, a backup power source is not necessary for the memory. As a result, SSDs are becoming more popular for both notebook computer and server applications. SSDs commonly include multiple memory chips, each chip commonly having a plurality of pins or contacts for connecting each of the memory chips to other components within a memory device. It is desirable to reduce the number of pins or contacts on a component in order to reduce the size of the component and to reduce the number of components on a memory device. U.S. Pat. No. 6,452,897 to Iwamoto et al. describes a semiconductor device with non-volatile memory comprising a non-volatile memory unit and a controller. The memory unit comprises a plurality of memory cells. The controller is connected to a control terminal and a first data terminal of the memory unit. The controller responds to a chip enable signal applied to a second data terminal of the memory unit. U

A small group of French citizens are celebrating the return of Antoine Griezmann to the French national team. At age 25, the scorer of goals on his debut, France's $142 million striker is, once again, leading France in a team that was looking to make a late run in the World Cup. In the group stage, which begins Friday in Melbourne against Australia, Griezmann has two goals and one assist. "I'm almost in good form now," he said. For Griezmann, these are the moments that matter, when he can be sure that he's an essential part of a great nation's success. He has been through a lot — Spain and his time at Atletico Madrid, a switch from Atletico to Barcelona, a switch to Real Madrid, and now France. And he has returned with the country's respect, if not its affection. "I love the people of France, I love the colors of France," he said. "I feel at home with France. I've found a second family."A record-breaking film by Bollywood veteran Bimal Roy has won the Golden Lion award at the Venice Film Festival, its producer announced. Bimal Roy's "Manoj Kumar: The Man, the Myth, the Legend" follows the life and career of late Hindi film actor Manoj Kumar. The film also features veteran actress Sushila, and is jointly produced by veteran screenwriter Nawal Kishore and noted British producer Mira Nair. It was made on a budget of $3 million and marked Roy's 60th year in the Bollywood industry. "I love making films and this film was no different from all the other ones I have made in terms of its content," said Roy. "This was purely a labor of love." Roy began his career as a scriptwriter for Hindi and Bengali films. He made his Bollywood debut as a director with "Aa Ab Laut Chalo" in 1959, which went on to win the National Film Award for Best Feature Film. "Parash Pathar" followed in 1961, which won the Golden Lion at the Venice Film Festival. "Manoj Kumar" has been released in India on April 23.
