comparison of the healing of rat type-II carotid lesions with and without pulsed electromagnetic fields. The results of two animal studies are compared concerning the influence of pulsed electromagnetic fields (PEMF) on type-II carotid lesions. Eleven rats had type-II carotid lesions induced by thermal injury to the common carotid artery. An electromagnetic coil (200 mg) was implanted subcutaneously on the left side and a sham coil on the right side. Sham-treated and PEMF-treated groups were compared for 17 days following carotid surgery. The rate of healing in the group with PEMF treatment was 62% at day 17, significantly higher than the 32% healing rate in the sham group.

Variables such as lesions induced and the treatment period of 17 days each had significant effects on the amount of healing. The sites of healing in the PEMF-treated rats were examined by histology and were found to be associated with blood vessels and fibroblasts in contrast to the sham rats in which the healing was associated with macrophages and capillaries. Unknown assailants throw explosive devices at police station in Upper Nazareth On Monday afternoon, several unidentified men threw explosive devices at police headquarters in the Upper Nazareth district. By May 25, 2018 Three explosive devices were thrown at the police headquarters in Upper Nazareth in the early hours of Monday morning, and a fourth device was found and intercepted by the IDF along the nearby main road. No injuries were reported, according to Israel Police. Police Chief Inspector Arye Dekel, of the Investigations Department of the Police, said that the planned

A: A quick Google search turns up this page: What looks like is that people extracted the ZTE_recovery_tool.tar.gz from the torrent and the extract the files they wanted separately. But here's the catch, the recovery tool appears to be only compatible with the MSM8910E if you're running MIUI, and the one in the linked torrent is for a different version of the ZTE. FAQ on XDA: If I already have a zip file (ZTE_recovery_tool.tar.gz) containing a set of files that can be used

I have been using a Mac for a few years now, but I have always been a Windows nerd. Also, in my previous post I briefly touched upon my opinion that Apple's 'flat' look was starting to become old and boring. As if to prove that flat and modernism in design are not the only way to go, Sony has just introduced a new line of sleek phones that will be supported by the Android OS. Sony a8es: First of all, the S-series will feature Windows Phone 8.1 but will be running on the newer Android 5.0 ("Lollipop"). In addition to a beautiful design, this phone will sport a 5.7 inch display, dual cameras at the back and an impressive battery capacity. Sony a7: The a7 will be the smaller sibling of the two phones above and will feature a 4 inch display and a 13MP camera at the back. This phone will also feature a smaller battery than the one in the a8. The Sony a7 will be priced at $399. Of course, none of these phones will be the first ever smartphone designed and manufactured by Sony. But they do signal a turning point in the way the company looks, something that is in my opinion a big success for them. Not that the iPhone and its now rival Android are perfect in themselves, but the trend is definitely towards a more straightforward and stripped down design.If you could make a special edition of your favorite candy, what would you want to make? [media.php?act=view&aid=15035& .Q: Add onUpdate and onSuccess listener I'm creating a reminder activity in android and i use Firebase RemoteConfig to change the color of my notifications. It works great when i use it with a TextView, but when i tried to use it with a button, my onSuccessListener never fires. I want my notifications to change color when user clicks on a button, not when the TextView is clicked. This is my code, I tried to use onClickListener and it didn't work either:

    FirebaseRemoteConfig config = new FirebaseRemoteConfig(this); config.setOnSuccessListener(new OnSuccessListener() { @Override public void onSuccess(Void aVoid) { //there is something wrong here }
});
    FirebaseDatabase database = FirebaseDatabase.getInstance();
    FirebaseDatabase child = FirebaseDatabase.getInstance(); DatabaseReference notificaciones =
database.getReference("notificaciones"); DatabaseReference color =
child.getReference("color");
color.setValue("5d5d5d");
notificaciones.setValue("1");
My Database(image included):
A: You can call setOnValueChangedListener method of DatabaseReference to get whenever configuration changed.
DatabaseReference rootRef =
    FirebaseDatabase.getInstance().getReference(); rootRef.addValueEventListener(new ValueEventListener() { @Override public void onDataChange(@NonNull DataSnapshot dataSnapshot) {
