DNA synthesis and cell proliferation are linked events in the proliferating cell cycle. Cellular DNA synthesis is regulated by cell proliferation which is correlated with cell growth. In addition, numerous studies have shown that DNA synthesis and mitosis are interconnected events. As DNA synthesis proceeds, mitotic activity occurs and ceases. Through these well-known and demonstrated relationships, it is reasonable to expect the presence and potential influence of other molecules important for DNA replication and cell growth that are also required for cell division. : tumour suppressor candidate 3 VSMC : vascular smooth muscle cell We thank Simon Attwell for providing us with the anti-K-Ras antibody, Andreas Rebsamen for providing us with the anti-BSN antibody, and Jan Dicke for providing us with the anti-Hsp27 antibody. The authors also thank Sabine Knies, Katrina Seiderer, and Kirsten Moeschler for their excellent technical assistance, and Sandra Ring for providing the human recombinant protein.
