Malignant pleural mesothelioma (MPM) is an aggressive tumor with a poor prognosis; options are limited. Due to the sensitivity of the mesothelium to proliferation-inhibition, new therapeutic approaches are being developed. Oxyurea is an inhibitor of ribonucleotide reductase with anti-proliferative effects in mesothelioma cells and a proof-of-concept study in MPM patients. We retrospectively analyzed our mesothelioma patients treated with/without intravenous (IV) or intrapleural (IP) oxyurea (Hypocrellin, Meso Scale Discovery, Rockville, Maryland
