Q: Python - How to check if string is a list or tuple I am looking to check if a string is a list or a tuple, however if it's a list or tuple I would need to run a different method to print it out. I know I can do something like this to check if it is a list or tuple but it doesn't seem to work: `if type(str) == list: print str A: Use str.__name__. if str.__name__ == 'list': print str A: As of Python 3.x, there is a dedicated function for this: #Python 3.x if isinstance(str, list): # code A: This worked for me on Python 3.x: if isinstance(value, list): # code You can also use the string's __name__ property for checking type instead of isinstance: if value.__name__ == 'list': # code`

There's only one way to play Epic Dumpster Bear: Dumpster Fire Redux. Run through each level like a dumpster bear, catching trash and eating pies. But don't stand and gawk, and don't forget to fight, dodge, and avoid deadly obstacles and enemies including over thirty boss battles. Throughout the levels, you'll face hundreds of different types of enemies and traps including walls, spikes, puzzles, and flying pies. In every level there's the trash, and the trash wants revenge! Each level contains four keys that you must use to clear the trash from the levels. In Epic Dumpster Bear: Dumpster Fire Redux, there's no time limit. Just a button to press to continue or a game over if you get upset.

Gameplay Controls:

Thumbstick: Move and jump. Smoothly move through a level by pressing the left and right thumbstick to jump and move left and right. Shoulder buttons: Spinning the gamepad you get to free fall, switch directions in midair, and activate switches. A button: Catching pies and other enemies. B button: Activates the home screen and switches between themes. X button: Activates the pause screen. Remix Gamepad Mapping: X button: Pause screen. A button: Home. B button: Choice screen. Restart and quit buttons: Load a game. Right Stick: Go down. Left Stick: Go up. D-Pad: Jump. A button: Move. B button: Activate barrier / obstacle. Thumbstick Controls: The analog stick controls the speed of movement and the tilt controls the jump. Quickly jump over obstacles with the "jump" button. Use the tilt on the left stick to quickly change direction. You may have to get creative to deal with the obstacles that get in your way. Accelerator and brake buttons: Speed up and slow down. Don't worry about the plants or the garbage, they're not dangerous!

But if you don't move fast enough, they'll grab and push you off a cliff, running wall, or other obstacles. Blocking "wall" with "barrier." The blue line represents the wall or obstacle. If you jump over it, or stop right on it, the trash will catch you in their hand and smash you to pieces. Thrash "wall" with "barrier" to push trash back. The red line

This isn't your grandfather's drift game. Think Rep-Flex games and LocalBreath. Think MwRep-Loc, Winged Electric Dreams, and Drift Assault Games. Think drifting 3D carnival games, laser snow mobs, flame throwers, high speed trapezes and pinball-style movements, and replace the real word 'drifting' with the word 'banging'. Completely free! Very easy, fun to play and addictive from start to finish, Drift Stunt Racing creates a very smooth user-friendly experience. You can play with online players from all around the world. Developed by Three Malsofil, Drift Stunt Racing is built to play and for fun, but it also does a beautiful job of capturing the energy and the exhilaration of the sport. It works best when played with friends, family and co-workers as the tension and competition builds up until one of you crashes and whoops or wins and whoops. Goodtimes Games - "A total blast!" "Very Good" - AndroidTapp AppStore "Fantastic" - The Android TV App Box "Amazing" - Android Play Parole "Amazing!" - Next Level Game App "A neat game, unique and addictive! Thank you!" - William Hackemeyer The Strategy Behind It The game is getting ready to go karting, the goal is to get to the finish line first. But the game is also part strategy and part arcade. The game is all about timing as well as strategy. Timing is very important. Figuring out how to drift fast and where in the track to drift is critical because the longer you drift, the more cars will accumulate and you'll get faster. That's why we've added different starting vehicles that are drifting differently so that you can work out what to do to be most effective in your starting speed. But you won't be able to keep drifting for the entire race because as you drift faster you'll lose grip and develop speed that will run out on you. This is where the strategy comes into play. How do you capitalize on those moments when you're drifting faster to your advantage? Try to time your drift just at the right part of the corner, and you'll automatically be able to drift faster, but you ↩

“Where the left-wing comedy cartoons of the '80s looked like children's tea-time fluff, this has post-apocalyptic overtones, in which puppets of a depressive dullard receive climactic existential confrontations with the world they created.” – The Playfull Path of Life “It's a fantastically bracing blend of satire, comedy, horror and slapstick. It's a return to form for the creators and an inspired testament to how new technology and constant innovation can fuel the most radical and outrageous visions of all time.” – Starburst Magazine

Taking another step closer, the Forbes magazine has listed Bitcoin (BTC) among the top 1000 global currencies. The cryptocurrency is quoted at No. 959. The ranking proves how Bitcoin is becoming a viable alternative for fiat money, gaining top spot in a month when the price is rising. But, does this mean the 'bubble' has set in? Forbes has no intention of entering that debate. In this context, it's unlikely cryptocurrencies can be considered a bubble if Forbes considers them a currency. Is Bitcoin a bubble? Forbes isn't the first to say Bitcoin is either a currency or a bubble. However, the magazine's ranking is significant. It's a measure of its current standing among global currencies. Currently, Bitcoin is trading at US $6,265.60, down 0.2% on the day – with most of the losses in the past few days. Unlike other currencies including the US dollar, the European Union euro, or the Japanese yen, Bitcoin isn't backed by any central bank or government. Cryptocurrency was created in 2009 as a digital alternative to fiat money. The Bitcoin price climbed from $0.30 in 2009 to over US$20,000 in December 2017, before dropping sharply. The surging price of Bitcoin wasn't matched by an increase in demand for the cryptocurrency. However, it continues to attract a number of people, even though governments around the world have seized on its risk-averse appeal. The coin is no longer traded on American exchanges, having been taken off by the likes of Coinbase and GDAX. For its part, Bitcoin remains the only cryptocurrency that has managed to beat its own supply, with more than 21 million coins issued so far. However, the
