A: The short answer is: yes, you can use Avil. USS Bowditch (1903) USS Bowditch (AP-54) was a troop transport acquired by the U.S. Navy during World War I. She was a replacement ship and was commissioned in 1917. She was sunk by a German submarine in 1918. The second USS Bowditch Bowditch (AP-54) was launched 29 April 1903 as SS Emory Grant by the Delaware River Iron Shipbuilding and Engine Company in Chester, Pennsylvania, sponsored by Miss A. G. Grant. She was completed and delivered at Philadelphia in February 1904. Commercial operation After delivery, Emory Grant was placed in service with the United Fruit Company operating on the American West Coast between San Francisco, California, and the Panama Canal. The vessel also traveled in Spanish and Mexican waters, carrying passengers and freight. World War I On 12 April 1917, the U.S. Navy acquired her from the United Fruit Company for the emergency use of World War I. She was commissioned at Philadelphia on 16 July 1917 as USS Emory Grant (AP-54). Assigned to the U.S. Navy Bowditch was used in the war effort by transporting soldiers, horses and supplies to Europe. From 9 August 1917 to 12 April 1918, she made six round trips transporting 1,336 passengers for the United States Army, the United States Red Cross, the Marine Corps, and the British War Department. On 12 April 1918, the day after the U.S. entered World War I, her armament was shifted from her original four 6-inch/57 caliber guns to three 7-inch/64 guns. Bowditch arrived at Plymouth, England, on 16 July 1918 to disembark the returning troops and begin her next voyage. Hereditary Agent (1920 - World War II) Having returned to private ownership on 25 July, she was converted to a troop transport and renamed SS Emory Grant. She operated from Washington, D.C., and Boston, Massachusetts, throughout the 1920s and into the 1930s. In November 1940, the ship was seized by the United States for war purposes and renamed Bowditch, the name by which she was to be known from then until 1944. World War II As a general purpose troop transport ship and hospital ship, SS Bowditch made
