Note While you are using Photoshop, any toolbars you activate or hide will remain active. When you open a photo, any toolbar you have activated appears on the screen. ## Selecting a Tool You can select a tool by clicking its name, or pressing the associated keyboard shortcut. For example, to select the Pen tool, simply click the Pen icon in the Toolbox. Photoshop works with a simple, text-based menu system. Clicking the menu name does not always select the first tool available. In this example, using the Pen tool will actually select the Pencil tool from the Toolbox. To change which tool is active, use the Backspace or Delete key to move the selection highlight in the Toolbox to the tool you want to use, and then press the shortcut key. You can press Shift+Tab and use the cursor keys to move the selection down through the tools to choose the one you want. Figure 2-12. On the left side of the Photoshop window

Below are some of Photoshop's brush and pen tools. Brushes are the most commonly used tool in Photoshop. They are used for various purposes like painting, retouching or watercolor effects. Brushes are generally categorized as follows:

Transparent Brushes: These brushes are used for areas that are transparent; such as windows or the sky. The best way to create these brushes is by using a painting program such as Photoshop and your own brush file.

Normal Brushes: A normal brush is just a brush with no special properties. It is essentially a standard brush (ab) that has a unique color and thickness, that allows it to create unique shapes and styles.

Pen Brushes: Pen Brushes are also brushes that have no special properties, however they will not affect the transparency of the image; making it easier to make multi-layer drawing. Pen brushes are particularly useful for creating a unique feel for a drawing or sketch.

Fills: These are used for creating a solid color without any transparency. They can be particularly useful for layering two images together. Fills can be created in two ways:

Color Fill: This method uses a color fill of the same color as a brush and then drips the color into the image as a single stroke. It can be created with a preset or adjusted and created by hand.

Gradient Fill: This method uses several gradient colors to create a single stroke color in the image. It requires much more skill to create a good gradient; so use caution when using it.

Gradients: You can either use gradients to create smooth or rough textures to the image. Smooth: This creates a soft edge and effect similar to a natural stone or foliage. It is one of the easiest gradients to create, but requires a lot of practice.

DACA Recipients — Julia Lozano & Lydia Rubarra

This week I interviewed recipients of the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program. Julia and Lydia are recipients and plan to start at El Paso Community College in January. “In order to pursue higher education in the United States, DACA recipients have to pursue higher education in the United States and the process can be quite complicated and prohibitive,” said Julia. “I was fortunate enough to obtain a scholarship from the Institute of Transformative Writing at Montclair State and in return, they covered all of my tuition,” she said. “The process was very complicated and tedious, I think that working with the Institute of Transformative Writing made it much more than just enrolling in college. You also have to make sure that they have the money to cover those tuition amounts as well as everything else,” she said. Lydia’s DACA status was transferred to her from her parents as she was awarded a scholarship. “Unfortunately I only had a limited amount of time, so it was very hard for me to get into any programs because of the process,” Lydia said. “It would have been easier if I had gone to college many years before. I feel like I am back where I started all over again, I got behind my peers and students,” she said. The DACA program was established in 2012 to protect young people who came to the United States before the age of 16 from deportation. The Obama administration announced that their work permits would
