The problems are: I am not allowed to add a reference of type Bitmap to the project. I need to do this in a portable way, which means I need the Bitmap to be allocated at runtime. Therefore, I am storing the Image's source and the Bitmap source into the same array, which is probably a bad idea. I have tried using the following snippets to get the Bitmap:

var display = Content.Content.LoadBitmapSource(uri); var bitmap = display as Bitmap; and var display = new BitmapImage(new Uri(uri)); var bitmap = display.Image;

However, both throws the following exception: Exception: The type of 'display' is not supported. Any ideas how I can get the bitmap of the currently displayed image? A: The returned DataImage should already be a BitmapImage by the time you try to get its bitmap. If it isn't, something else is probably using its data so you will have to allocate the bitmap yourself. Tag: Secretary of State Rex Tillerson President Trump's secretary of State, Rex Tillerson, has told the president's national security adviser, Gen.
