NStatus is always 0 I'm trying to push a message to my Redis server using a push notification using the following command: redis-cli -p 8888 -h localhost -s 12 -m "trigger myTrigger" Which, when printed, produces the following result "ERR Error from client (127.0.0.1): list index out of range" * Closing connection #0 I've been working with Redis for a few months now and never had issues like this. What am I doing wrong? Edit The webapp that receives the notification triggers the following action def on_message(message): print "Logging something" db.add_message(message["userId"], message) A: I've found the issue. The notification is actually sent to the Redis server, however the error is thrown in a browser, as a result of the webapp not opening the socket in its own port.
