Gameplay A different objective from the other Dawn of War games is "Ultimate victory", which is a 1000-point objective which can be a combination of destroying all enemy bases, destroying more enemy structures than your opponent, and/or destroying more enemy units than your opponent. The player with the highest Ultimate victory points (as opposed to total victory points) at the end of a game is deemed the winner. Chaos Rising adds to the gameplay by increasing the number of players available, as well as new scenarios, more units, more abilities, and units being able to stack on top of one another. The six playable factions for Chaos Rising include the Space Marines, Death Guard, Chaos Space Marines, Blood Ravens, Eldar and Orks. Each faction has different unit configurations and starting locations, though the new Chaos faction can be played in any old Chaos campaign game mode, plus it has one new map, a fifth playable faction, and adds four new Chaos-based units.

Reception Dawn of War: Chaos Rising received positive reviews. It scored 80/100 on Metacritic and over 84% on GameRankings. On the IGN Best of 2015 Readers' Choice, it was the runner up behind Battlefield 1. Sequel Chaos Rising (2015) was announced in January 2015 and in April 2015 was released as a stand-alone expansion for Dawn of War II. It became the first expansion for the series that would not feature the "Chaos Rising" title.
