Create beautiful images in Photoshop Elements with the help of Pixlr's filters, effects, and elements for free. It was originally released in 2007 and contains over 100 filters. Image editing basics Learning Photoshop is not as easy as taking a few classes and sitting down at a computer to start editing images. You need to have a good understanding of basic image editing principles to get the most out of Photoshop. In this tutorial, I'll teach you how to edit images in the various modes available in Photoshop. You will learn how to retouch images with the different tools and techniques. This tutorial contains a lot of images and illustrations but it's worth taking the time to go through it. You will learn a lot about image editing. You can start by viewing the lesson below. Begin the Photoshop Elements tutorial Using Photoshop Elements Using Photoshop Elements is simple. Let me help you with that. Here is how to use the software: Download and install the software. Open the program and log in. It will prompt you to sign up for an AdobeID. Sign in and create a profile for the program. You can also create a free profile that you can use for your personal projects. Now that you've installed the software, open it and start creating a new document in the software or open an existing document that you want to edit in the software. Now you can start editing the images in the document. The default settings in Photoshop are as follows: The document window is full screen. This ensures that the image in the document fills the entire screen. You can see the background. You've got a lot of options in the main window. You will have to make selections in the image. You can either apply a filter or use any tool to make a selection. You need to select the tool that you are using to make your edits to the image. This is especially important if you are not going to use the tool to make a selection that you will use to create a mask. In this case, you have to select what tool you want to use for the next step. While editing, you can use all the tools available to you. To close the document window, press Ctrl+F4. Finding a Way Back Home It's been a long time since I've posted. Over the last couple of years, we've moved pretty often, and that has kept me busy, so I haven't had much time for writing. But I'm back home, and I'm going to try to post more regularly here. I'm in Utah now, but I went back to school this past year, so I'm not really sure how much free time I'll have. I'm hoping to have time to work on some games though. Now that I have a stable PC again, I'm trying to become more comfortable with the platform, which is actually pretty easy since it was designed to teach games. I've been playing with XNA all semester and have put together a pretty good amount of resources on the subject: Haven't had much time to work on my games lately, but I'm hoping to work on more now that I'm more settled. Investment bank Morgan Stanley is raising a $125m bond for the state-owned Nigerian power company Power Holding Company of Nigeria (PHCN). Morgan Stanley will serve as the sole arranger of the new six-year issue, which is expected to be priced at around 143bp over swap rate and is due for redemption in November 2020. The bank will be on the same side as strategic and institutional investors, the company said. The bond will be part of Morgan Stanley's push to become more involved in the sovereign bond market since it last raised a $500m five-year floating-rate note in February. The $125m underwriting fee is expected to be split with several co-managers. The deal is part of Morgan Stanley's push to diversify its low-yield clientele in emerging markets, and could be the first in a series of deals for the bank, the company said. "Our concentration in emerging markets is largely driven by the desire to have greater exposure to fixed income assets that are a proxy for the performance of the real economy," said the company's president in the Middle East and Africa, Michael Angell. "In many emerging markets, we see low-interest yields combined with low commodity prices as key factors to attract investors." The deal was closed

Have a cup of this and fall in love too.Q: Is it possible to bind an event on other element when parent element is focus? Imagine a Input field : I have an ajax validation and when the input is focused I'm checking if the user entered something that is not valid. If it is ok, it's not acceptable to put this value as a placeholder. I can easily do this with javascript but I don't know how to do it with css or html tag. Is it possible to add an event listener on other element, when the focus is on an input and the user has not entered anything? A: You can use focus/blur with jQuery or Javascript.

$("#text").on("blur", function () { if (!this.value) { alert("not valid"); } });

A: You can achieve this by using: CSS :focus JavaScript :focus() The CSS will bind event handler on the element, even if the user has not yet interacted with the element. The Script will trigger the event handler only when the user has interacted
